Dear Mr. Ekström,

I will call up Mr. Barry, & glad of the chance.

About Mohogan, Rutenber has this:-

"Muhedocum was the name of the people occu--ping both banks of the river (Hudson) from -- a few miles south of Catskill, north & east -- The Dutch wrote Mahicon, Maikan, & the English of Connecticut Mohogan, which was claimed by Dr. Schoolcraft & Rumbull to be derived from maingun (see Mahigun) wolf -- From this prevailing totem or prevailing coat of arms, the wolf, the French called them loups, 'wolves', and also manhingans, including under the name 'the nine nations situated between Manhattan & Quebec.'"

This looks reasonable, though there is a little room for speculation on other lines.

The under meaning of the wolf name connects with eating, & it is the animate form, what is eaten was the meat eat, perhaps people; Mohawk did mean cannibal.

Your Mohogan word for monugian seems surely a spelling of the common word for island -- menakau usually.

I think your coraland name is pretty
