commence in the digestive organs.

Q. Does dissection of the brain plus local lesion almost invariably in a chronic form of insanity? A. In some forms of insanity it does.

Q. So much so that in dissection in certain forms of insanity you look for certain lesions of organs of the brain A. Evidently.

Q. Do we not, in dissecting the brain, find a confirmation of the science of phrenology? A. I do not have much confidence in this matter of phrenology. I have had phrenologists examine my head a good many times and they gave me a good deal better character than I thought I deserved, and I finally gave it up.

Q. What is the ratio of cure over there in the hospital? A. I have taken a little pains to make some figures as to it.
I cannot make it much different from 37 per cent, taking the general average, say since 1850, since the fire. During the best year I think it was about 30 per cent.

Q. Have you noticed the tables of in the
