

concluded to let them go. John Loring (a Lola as it used to be called) and Louis Toma were of the party.

When more than eighty years of age, the old Gorman killed a horse on Sunkhazy.

Late in life he invariably wore a long skirted black frock coat with a red silk handkerchief knotted about his throat. He never wore a shirt. Uncle Hardy has a painting of him but it makes him look too haggard and thin. (This is now in the Tarantini Club in Bangor) It was painted in 1830(?)

Some years before his death having told my grandfather that he was 90 years old, a ro-man interrupted him saying he was not so old. In a very scornful tone, utterly disregarding the Roman, he addressed himself to my grandfather: "That Roman, he just four years older my oldest daughter. When he been that time we born? how he know?"

Not printed