

Three Indians bought a bottle of whiskey together and hid it in a pile of rdgings back of a building near where they were at work - The one who told the story said he saw one of them go to the place after the other two had visited more than their share, and draw out the bottle, which he held up to the light. "Looks like them whiskey she's thunderin' few," was his comment.