

dividends - The Pawncots used to draw two annuities a year. These were issued in corn, flour, pork, tobacco, molasses, broadcloth powder, shot, & full blankets. At one time of the year they had a given number of yards of <sup>red</sup> broadcloth, at another of blue broadcloth. Only hunters drew dividends containing powder and shot. In the spring the hunters were allowed 2 lbs of powder & 4 of shot.

Later the dividends were given in money. They also got a "bounty" on raising crops. The ploughing was done for them and the seed furnished by the state; then "to encourage them", a bounty was offered besides. However they did not engage much in the industry.
