

Mutual P. Lewey.

Lewey Tomatis son was Mitchell Lewey. He himself spelled the name Mutual P. Lewey. He was always being taken with spirits, even when mowing. On such occasions he would drop his scythe and fly round like mad, sometimes turning round in saults for an indefinite length of time. When taken with one of these spells he would stand for a moment with one of those dazed expressions on his face such as a calf has when about to bolt "Mustn't you talk. You scare um my spirits. He go oh-oh-oh! Mustn't you scare um. He go out of mind my spirits". He always seemed to have the greatest reverence for "his spirits". Mitchell died in the war.