

Indian Legends.

Pamola - a great giant who lives at the end of the world and goes back and forth with a loud noise, once in every three years. He eats little children. Some of the older Indians still believe him. (Clara Francis).

The tale used to be that he lived on Katatidin & noticed a beautiful Squaw to come and live with him. "I see Katin pine, came home some squaw she always catch 'em debble". (Springer)

Leland gives some Pamola a "Bumole" legends

But Clara Neptune says "Katatidin he man. Bumolei he different - no legs, no little" (+ she was not a Squaw - he was body of about foot long on the chest) only have little snout - all legs, hands. Katatidin he different - mountain was near man."
