

came, to specify something peculiar to them.
An instance is (doubtless) at the Vineyard where a mill was erected at the first settlement — "Tahemmy" (shortened from 7 several roots) = where the corn is ground: (free translation) or where they go to grind corn.

One of the main words that has puzzled me is Agamentew which I have made some progress. "Aguahega" for Damarills Cove Id is respectfully set aside for the present. I see some possibilities in it.

Another element in name words is the French complication where those early explorers got hold of Algonkian place names and rendered them in French and we English have added insult to injury by a second transfer to our own tongue.
I recall Pescadore for Piscataqua.

Still, with all the damage done, the name names are pretty well preserved and the field has been only scratched,
